"The old-fashioned orator used to pause for a reply."

The Great Unknown.

Who is the greatest man who has ever lived? The question went around a dinner table, and controversy raged from the fish onward. There were two who plumped for Julius Caesar, two more for Napoleon, one, thinking of statues, said Shakespeare, and somebody else, who did not get a hearing at all, murmured Buddha at intervals, while most of the people present who did not know Greek, said Aeschylus. But Aristotle won easily. It was not a particularly scholarly assemblage, and one wondered rather how many of Aristotle's enthusiastic devotees could have quoted accurately from him, had ever read him, indeed, since they left college. And all the while probably, the greatest man of all ages is pegging away among us unnoticed, unrecognized, while we snapshot and interview all the little men or go back to some one who has been dead long enough for us to find out that we may safely praise him.—Dundee Advertiser.

Why Coral Is Popular.

The dealer held up two strings of coral. They were of equal size, but one was dark and dull in hue, the other beautifully pink and translucent.

"The dark one," he said, "is worth 50 cents, the pink one is worth $500." That is what makes coral so popular. It suits all pocketbooks.

"All the world over it goes. These strings of rough, uncut beads are for the dead, the dead of India. They are put around the necks of the bodies about to be burnt in the ghats.

"These large and blood red beads go to Africa. They are much liked by the natives, whose dark skin they perfectly suit.

"Here are a lot of coral hands with fingers extended in a V, the gesture that wards off the evil eye. The coral hands are for Italy, where the belief in their efficacy is widespread."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Kenyon Cox's Criticism.

Kenyon Cox had little to say concerning the Borglum article, and that little was far, far from complimentary.

"The article doesn't amount to a row of pins," he declared. Then, after a short pause, he added:

"No art that has amounted to anything in the history of the world has been an original art.

"Art must borrow. Only a small infusion of the artist's personality is called for in works of art.

"American artists are as genuine and sincere as any other artists anywhere."

And, after another short pause:

"Of course, I am tempted to say a lot of things about Mr. Borglum himself, but—well, that's all I have to say."

The Joys of Life in Africa.

You must never walk barefoot on the floor, no matter how clean it is, or an odious worm, called a "jigger," will enter your foot to raise a numerous family and a painful swelling. On the other hand, be sure when you put on boots or shoes that, however hurried, you turn them upside down and look inside, lest a scorpion, a small snake, or a perfectly frightful kind of centipede may be lying in ambush. Never throw your clothes carelessly upon the ground, but put them away at once in a tin box, and shut it tight, or a perfect colony of fierce-biting creatures will beset them. And, above all quinine.—Strand Magazine.

From the big slump in the matrimonial market it appears that a good many young women refused to wed during leap year for fear that they will be suspected of having done the proposing, says the Washington Post.

One of the penalties for not spending your money on pleasures is the way you can waste it in investments, confesses the New York Press.
